Prof. Raymond G. Mowery, superintendent of the public schools in Franklin county and president of the Franklin county Sunday School association, spoke on "The Church and Its Function," at the 77th anniversary observance of the Biglerville Evangelical United Brethren church on Sunday.

Forefathers of the church had faith and vision that is so often lacking today, said the speaker, adding that the church's mission is to evangelize and that its message is that of redemption through the blood of Jesus Christ.

The speaker stated we have advantages that our forefathers did not have and yet churches today are doing far less than the early churches in redeeming lost souls. Prof. Mowery concluded by stating that the church of today must not only be a church of vision but a church of action.

ROTARY GIVEN TALK, FILM ON CAN INDUSTRY

Activities of the merchandising and marketing division of the American Can corporation were outlined Monday evening at the regular meeting of Rotary held at the YWCA.

Edward Walsh, New York city, sales manager for the company, outlined the policy of the company in connection with promotion of sales for concerns which utilize cans "as typical of similar services by all large American industries."

Constant surveys are made of the market and industries utilizing cans, he said, in order to aid the manufacturers of the products using the cans to do a better job. Home economics instructors are retained to teach groups and individuals better ways of using canned foods. Motion pictures are made to show the value of foods and other articles in cans.

"Old Fashioned Ideas"

He showed a motion picture entitled "Vitamin Rivers" which depicted the history of the fruit industry in the United States and Hawaii, and showed how many products are canned. Part of the film was taken in Adams county and showed the harvesting of tomatoes.

Noting that "many old fashioned ideas still persist about cans," Walsh said that "one of our jobs is convincing people the cans make the best containers for foods after they have been opened. The can is far more sterile a container than any dish that a housewife may have washed and set on a shelf before putting food into it and placing it in the refrigerator."

John A. Hauser, president of the C. H. Musselman company introduced the speaker. Fifty-seven attended the meeting at which President William G. Weaver presided.

Leitner elected to go around the oil truck on its left, police said. The Glenn L. Bream garage and Elks continued in their deadlock for second place in the softball league by scoring one-sided victories Monday evening.

Scoring in every inning of the opening game, the garageemen crushed the VFW outfit 17-6 to avenge one if its two reverses this season. The victors poked out 18 hits, including homers by Frazer and A. Hankey.

The fast moving Elks won the nightcap by a 16-1 score as Ross Sachs gave up but four hits to the Eagles whose lone run was on a homerun by Woodward in the fifth. Sachs and Troxell also poked homers for the Elks, each with two runners aboard.

Final rosters for the season were approved at a brief meeting of managers held at the Recreation field. It was also decided to continue starting the first game each evening at 7:15 instead of at 7:30 as originally planned when the schedule was drawn up.

SNEAD MAY KEEP HIS PGA TITLE

Columbus, Ohio, June 20 (AP)—Drawing Sam Snead, the balding better from Surphur Springs, W. Va., looks like a pretty fair bet to retain his PGA championship in the $40,000 classic opening tomorrow.

Always serious when money is mentioned, Sam seems downright determined to hang on to the title—and incidentally to pick up the $3,500 prize which goes with it.

Most of the 129 qualifiers for the mid-century event were on hand today for their last free ride around Scioto County's club's tricky 7,032-yard layout—a course studded with traps, hump-backed fairways and hard-to-figure greens, not to mention some pretty rugged rough.

At least 80 wheeled around in practice sessions yesterday, and as usual Snead had the gallery. It was his first look at the battlefield, but he clipped a stroke off par with a 37-34-71, getting a birdie on the last hole.

Ralph Hutchison of Bethlehem, Pa., who carded a 31 on the front nine Sunday, only to finish with 69, zoomed through the home stretch in 32 yesterday.

Chambersburg May Get Loop Franchise

Wilmington, Del., June 20 (AP)—The Philadelphia Phillies may move their Interstate league franchise from Wilmington unless there is a "tremendous increase" in fan interest before the end of the Class B loop's current season.

Phillies' owner Robert R. M. Carpenter told the Harrisburg, Pa., Patriot News on Sunday in an interview that the Phillies are polling the membership of the Interstate league for permission to make a shift.

"We have three or four cities under consideration as possible locations for the franchise," Carpenter said. "It isn't television," he added. "It isn't any one thing you can put your finger on."

Wilmington is in second place now, behind the Hagerstown Braves. Carpenter said the shift away from Wilmington might be made before the end of the season "if we could find proper facilities at a suitable location."

One of the spots reported under consideration is Chambersburg, Pa.

DODGERS STOP GIANT STREAK; TIE UP CARDS

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
Tip to the National league clubs—don't bring a winning streak into Ebbets Field. Those unsympathetic Brooklyn Dodgers are sure to crack it.

Really, it's uncanny the way the devil-may-care Dodgers cool off the "red hot" clubs.
First it was Philadelphia. The young, eager Phillies stormed into Ebbets Field on Memorial Day in first place as a result of winning five of their previous six starts. The Brooks immediately polished them off twice to knock them off the top perch.

Cards Were Next
Then it was St. Louis. The Cards came into Brooklyn last Friday leading the league by three and a half games. The Dodgers thrashed them three straight times to send them limping away with only a half-game lead.

Last night it was New York. The Giants moved in with four wins in their last five starts. Another triumph would boost them into a fifth place tie with Chicago.

But it was not to be. Led by Jackie Robinson and Carl Furillo, the Dodgers dusted them off, 8-5, for their fourth victory in as many meetings with their interborough rivals.

The victory, Brooklyn's fourth in a row, moved the Dodgers into an exact first place tie with the idle Redbirds. Each team has won 32 and lost 20.

Pirates Nip Braves
The Braves fell three games off the pace last night when Cliff Chambers of the Pittsburgh Pirates bested Lefty Warren Spahn in an old-fashioned 1-0 duel.

A two-out single by Danny Murtaugh in the second inning, a poor throw by Sibby Sisti and Earl Turner's one-bagger brought in Murtaugh with the only run of the game.

The game was enlivened by a skirmish between Chambers and Boston's Earl Torgeson. The latter Batting: Marv Rickert, White Sox—homered in the last of the 11th to give the White Sox a 4-3 victory over the Washington Senators. Rickert also singled to open the ninth and eventually scored the tying run on a long fly by Nelson Fox.

Pitching: Cliff Chambers, Pirates—yielded only four hits—all singles—in besting Warren Spahn in a pitching duel as Pittsburgh defeated the Boston Braves, 1-0.

rushed Chambers in the third inning after he was grounded by a close pitch. Not a blow was struck, as usual. Chambers had hit Torgy on the back with a pitched ball in the first inning of Sunday's second game.

Senators Lose Close One
Just before he was "low-bridged," Torgeson had lashed a long foul into the right field stands. The bespectacled Boston first baseman and Chambers are natives of the same state—Washington.

Chambers allowed only four hits to Spahn's five. He stopped Sam Jethroe's hitting streak at 15, horse-collar the negro centerfielder four times.

In the only American league game, the Chicago White Sox nipped the Washington Senators, 4-3, in 11 innings. Outfielder Marv Rickert's home run in the 11th enabled Randy Gumpert to gain his first victory of the season. He pitched two scoreless innings of relief. The Sox tied the score at 3-3 in the ninth when Nelson Fox, who scored the first Chicago run, fled out to send in Rickert from third.

Ralph Branca pitched his first complete game for the Dodgers since August 1, 1949, although he was tagged for 12 hits by the Giants. Four errors helped Brooklyn pick up as many unearned runs to win.

Branca started with a rush, striking out 10 Giants in the first five innings. But he was lucky to finish. The Dodgers got 10 hits off five Giant pitchers with Robinson and Furillo making three apiece. New York's Whitey Lockman, hotter than a quarter pistol lately, collected four safeties to give him 15 hits in his last 26 times at bat. Clint Hartung was the loser.

The only other scheduled game, that between the Cincinnati Reds and Phillies, was rained out.

were brought from Hagerstown to work on this avenue.

At a special meeting of the Gettysburg School board last Thursday evening, Mrs. Kate Witherow, of Cumberland township, was chosen teacher of the colored school, in this place.

The town has been in darkness since last Friday owing to the arrangement of the electric arc light dynamo at the power house burning out. Superintendent Gintling tells us that the defect will be remedied by the last of this week as a new dynamo has been ordered and will be put in position as soon as possible.

Skelly and Warner have built a large warehouse at the Reading railroad to store their heavy hardware.

The salary for the postmaster at

WAYFINDERS

There are few people more inspiring than the ones who go right ahead, under all sets of circumstances, and make a way for themselves, incidentally setting a fine example for others. Our pioneers, inventors, and scientists have been wayfinders.

When an animal is cornered it works fast to seek a way out, and that is exactly what each of us must do all through life. We must keep finding ways to get ahead, to better our standing and to get out of difficulties. Historic people have always been wayfinders—people with the will who went ahead and made the way.

I still keep marveling over the invention of the radio, whereby I can set a little box on my desk and get the voices I wish from thousands of miles away—and our latest television invention leaves me wondering more than ever at man's ability to find a way to such miracles.

Great thinkers have led the way to revelations and conclusions never before reached. They have been wayfinders to trains of thought that have enriched thousands of other minds. Just think of what Darwin did in his theory of evolution! Consider what the Wright brothers did in their persistent belief that man could conquer the air through the airplane. They were inspired wayfinders.

We owe more to others than we realize, for so often being guided into ways that have meant so much to us, adding materially to our happiness. On the other hand, we gain great satisfaction, in return, by helping others to find a solid way ahead.

The hunter places full confidence in his guide through strange territory and thick forests, for he knows that he will not be led astray. Undoubtedly that guide takes pride in his wayfinding.

Many times in life are we beset with a feeling of loss and isolation! It is then that "a feller needs a friend," if ever, and we hope to find someone who will lead us back to ourselves. Often that one is the Heavenly Father of us all, in whom we can well place our trust, and to whom we can always turn for guidance to the safe way ahead.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "Essays."

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST

SEVENTY-EIGHT

At seventy-eight, you'd think that he
To settle down content would be.
Instead, with heart and muscles
stout,

He wears his younger comrades out.
"Come on!" he tells them with a frown.

"You're wasting time by sitting down."

Though time has crossed his face
with lines,

Still in his eye the twinkle shines.
Still as a child he seems to be Bursting with untamed energy,

As if he deems it a disgrace
To stop for breath or slow his pace.

His friends have dubbed him "General Grant."

As sturdy as a century plant,
So blithe of spirit he appears Never to feel the weight of years.
Still, as he tells them: "Feeling great!"

A boy at heart at seventy-eight.

35 Scouts Haines Guests
Thirty-five Boy Scouts from Littlestown Troop No. 84 were among the 2,000 Boy Scouts of the York-Adams area which attended the Pan-Jan-Drum at Haines Acres, near Hallam, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. Haines, the "Shoe Wizard," who sponsored this event, furnished all of the food.
The Scouts prepared their own food excepting the meat. Mr. Haines had four buffaloes, three of which were killed and roasted for the Scouts and the other buffalo was kept to display to the Scouts. This event was in commemoration of Mr. Haines' 75th birthday anniversary.

The Littlestown troop received a flag for passing the camp site inspection. In addition to the program planned for the Scouts, the local Scouts took two hikes; the first was to Wildcat falls along the Susquehanna, and the other was in the hills surrounding Haines Acres.

Littlestown Scout leaders stated that the local Scouts slept in their own beds by 16 wall tents and on their own cots. This equipment was transported to the camp site by Howard Wierley of town. Transportation for the Scouts was furnished by Charles Ritter, Stanley R. Sell, Ed Geiman and Luther D. Snyder. Adult leaders who were with the boys were Ed Geiman, assistant Scoutmaster, and

PA. POPULATION SHOWING JUMP OF FIVE PER CENT

Harrisburg, June 20 (AP)—Pennsylvania's population in 1950 is running about 5.4 per cent ahead of 1940 figures on the basis of preliminary census counts from all but 13 counties.

A rundown of preliminary figures reported from 54 counties Monday showed a total of 4,854,483 residents compared to 4,605,550 from the same counties 10 years ago, a gain of 248,933.

county, the Commonwealth's two biggest counties, are not in yet.
Neither are Bucks, Chester, Cumberland, Dauphin, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Lancaster, Lebanon, Luzerne, Montgomery and Somerset counties.

Going Over 10 Million

These outstanding counties are expected to just about double the 4,642,152 figure of the 54 counties already in. This would send the Keystone state's census past the 10-000,000 mark for the first time in history. Pennsylvania reported 9-900,180 in 1940 and 9,631,350 in 1930.

The steepest upsurge in population among the counties reported to date is in Delaware county where the 1950
figure of 413,065 compares to 1940's 310,756. A similar trend was expected from neighboring counties of Philadelphia like Chester, Bucks and Montgomery because of expanded suburban housing developments.

Thirty of the 54 counties already in showed population gains with some of them gaining sharply—Erie, up 37,500; York, up 24,500, and Northampton, up 15,600.

24 Counties Dropped

The remaining 24 counties fell off in resident counts, chiefly in the anthraxic region where Schuylkill lost about 28,000 and Northumberland, about 10,000. Lackawanna and Luzerne, also in the hard coal section, anticipate declines, too. If it loses more than 13,000 from its 1940 figure of 441,513, Luzerne will forfeit its status as the third largest county to Delaware.

Forest county seemed sure to hold on to the rating of being the smallest in the state—population-wise—with a listing of 4,919 for 1950 compared to 5,791 ten years ago.
Cameron is likely to remain next to the least populated county with 7,105 residents now in comparison to 6,852 a decade ago.

A quirk in 1950 census rules — college students are counted as residents in the county where the institution is located instead of their hometowns—gave Centre county a 13,000-person boost in population.
There are more than 10,000 students at the Pennsylvania State College in Centre county.

IT'S DEATH, MY DARLING!

By Amelia Reynolds Long

AP Newsfeatures

Chapter 1

I know it sounds contrary to reason for the funeral to come first and the murder afterwards. But in the case of Grandpere Dumont's funeral, most natural laws seemed to have been set aside, as though supernatural laws had taken their place.

My introduction to it arrived in the form of two air mail letters, both postmarked New Orleans. One, addressed absently to "Miss Peter Piper," was, of course, from my fiancé, Amedee Dumont. The other, addressed with more dignity to "Miss Katherine Piper," bore the legend, "Duval, Duval, Mollineux, and Pieczinski, Attorneys-at-Law." I decided to read it first, and save Amedee's letter until later. This is what I read:

My dear Miss Piper: In accordance with the instructions of our late client, Colonel Etienne Dumont, it is incumbent upon us to inform all his blood relatives and all persons at present affianced to any of said blood relatives, of his recent demise on the eighteenth instant. The funeral is planned, tentatively, for the twenty-second instant. Please notify us, whether it will be possible for you to attend. Please bring with you a white evening dress.

Your obedient servants,
Duval, Duval, Mollineux, and Pieczinski.
(Signed) Simeon Duval.

Now formal invitations to funerals, especially funerals to be attended in white evening dresses, were a little out of my line, so I turned to Amedee's letter in the hope of finding some further explanation. It read as follows:

Dear Peter,
By this time you must have received Mr. Duval's letter about Grandpere's funeral. You'll come, of course. Since Grandpere was a little eccentric, it promises to be something unique in the way of funerals. Affectionately, Dede.

Something unique in the way of funerals! Feeling a little like the young man in the song who "went to the funeral just for the ride," I wired Mr. Simeon Duval, succeeded in obtaining passage on a plane, and arrived at the New Orleans airport on the twenty-first. There I was met enthusiastically by Amedee.

"You'll probably think this is an odd kind of funeral, Peter, but we're merely doing our best to carry out Grandpere's own wishes."

"What are they?" I asked, trying not to let too much curiosity show in my voice.

"First," he replied, "he didn't want any display of what he called funeral faces."

"Second, he directed that he be buried in his old Confederate uniform, and that all his male descendants wear the grey as well. Just before the casket is closed, his sword is to be withdrawn from its scabbard and given to his eldest grandson—my cousin Claude—as new head of the house."

"Then Grandpere used to be a breeder of blooded horses. He's left one of them to each of us. We're to ride them as a guard of honor when his body is taken to the family mausoleum."

"Finally, when the funeral is over, there's to be a formal dinner, which the men are to attend in uniform. The women are to wear white evening dresses, with a corsage of oleanders—for Oleander Plantation. Then, after the will has been read, a special case of champagne, which Grandpere had kept twenty years for the occasion, is to be opened."

He went on with an abrupt change of subject. "Practically all the Dumonts are a little wacky. First, there's Uncle Raoul, the only one of Grandpere's five sons who's living. He named all three of his children after Confederate generals: Lee, Beauregard, and Pickett."

"Oh, Heaven!" I exclaimed, laughing. "What if one of them had been a girl?"

"One of them was," he replied. "Pickett's a girl."

"Who else is there?" I inquired.

"Then there's Aunt Delphine," he resumed. "She's an aunt by marriage—the widow of my father's eldest brother, for whom I was named. She's—rather peculiar."

He hesitated, as though he was finding difficulty in expressing just what he meant.

"She must be almost eighty by now, but she's got an imagination that's still in its lusty prime also. She's got a neat little trick of taking out her false teeth and mislaying them in unexpected places."

"I'm glad you told me," I said with mock seriousness.

"Then there is Aunt Minerva, the mother of Claude. She and Claude have lived in Chicago ever since I can remember."

Again he paused; and I got the impression that he was not overly fond of either his cousin Claude or Aunt Minerva.

There's Cousin Jeff Marshall, and there's Lewis Haye, Grandpere's estate manager, practically a member of the family. He'll become one in fact, if he can get Pick's consent. And there are Henri and Bobby."

Bobby was Roberta Brennon, who had been in college with me, and was now engaged to his brother, Henri, who was in the oil business.

"Another thing about Aunt Delphine, Peter," he said, and now his voice had become more serious. "Lately she's got the idea—because of my name, I suppose—that I'm the reincarnation of her son, who was killed in the first World War. I generally try to humor her in it. But I wanted you to understand, in case she says anything about it to you."

I told him that I did understand, and suddenly found myself feeling very sorry for the poor old lady, false teeth and all.

Chapter 2

We approached the house along a winding driveway bordered on either side by the oleanders, now in full bloom, from which the place took its name. The house itself was of traditional Southern architecture. At either corner, and about 10 feet removed from the house proper, was an octagonal structure. These were the garconnières erected by the original builder of the house for his growing family of sons. At present, as I learned a little later, they were occupied respectively by Amedee and Henri, and Beauregard Dumont and Lewis Haye.

As Amedee brought the car to a stop in front of the house, the broad front door opened, and an elderly colored man hurried to the side of the car.

By this time a woman who appeared to be somewhere in her early sixties had come out upon the gallery. She wasn't fat exactly, but she was what might be described as a lady with a front. Seeing me, she sailed forward.

"So this is Katherine!" she exclaimed. "Welcome to Oleander Plantation, my dear."

"Aunt Minerva, Peter," Amedee introduced.

"How do you do?" I murmured feebly.

Aunt Minerva turned to the colored man. "Take Miss Katherine's things upstairs, Bountiful," she directed. "She's to share the west room with Miss Roberta." She slipped a plump arm about my waist, and swept me across the gallery and into the house.

A door near the foot of the stairs opened, and a man appeared. He had the dark hair and eyes of the Dumonts, but there the family resemblance stopped. His other features were encased in a soft puffiness which gave him the appearance of a slightly dissipated cherub.

"My son Claude, Katherine," Aunt Minerva announced.

Claude Dumont had been smoking a big, crook-stemmed pipe. Now he removed it from his mouth to permit his face to crease itself into an oily smirk.

"Well!" he exclaimed. Then he advanced and enveloped my hand in a big paw that felt like warm, sticky taffy. "The Dumont men sure know how to pick 'em. You and I will have to get better acquainted, Peter."

The situation was saved by the sudden entrance of a girl. Her dark, curling hair was cut short, like my own, and her boyish slenderness was emphasized by the sport shirt and jodhpurs she was wearing.

"Hello," she said, getting in under the wire ahead of Aunt Minerva's introduction. "You're Peter, aren't you? I'm Dede's cousin, Pick."

"I'm awfully glad to meet you, Pick," I said. I was thinking that if she hadn't come along when she did, I might have had to resort to a cold chisel to get my hand free from Claude's.

Aunt Minerva cleared her throat to command attention.

"If you're going upstairs to dress now, Pickett," she said, "you may show Katherine to her room. I presume that she will want to refresh herself after her journey."

We escaped up the stairs then, leaving Claude still smirking fatuously.

Pick left me at the door of the west room, where I found Bobby Brennon, who was to share it with me, doing things to her face in front of a mirror.

"Well," she observed as soon as we had exchanged greetings, "I see you've met Cousin Claude."

"How do you know?" I asked in surprise.

"He's the only one here," she explained, "who takes advantage of the cousin relationship to paw. I can tell from your expression that he must have tried it on you."

"Well, not exactly," I answered with a laugh that the recent memory of Claude made a little forced. Then I asked, "What are the rest of them like?"

"Beau reminds you of something out of a Sabatini novel," she began. "Lee is nice, too, in a quiet sort of way. Uncle Raoul, their father, thinks of us as Damnedyankees—a little word—but he does it like a gentleman, so it isn't offensive. Cousin Jeff Marshall I can't quite make out; but—"

A light tap at the door interrupted her, and in response to our joint "Come in" a little old lady entered. Appearing not to have noticed Bobby, she came straight to me.

"You are Peter?" she asked. "And you are Aunt Delphine?" She nodded, and smiled in a vague sort of way. Her faded gray eyes studied my face with an oddly childlike curiosity.

"You are just as Dede said you would be," she observed finally, as though satisfied. Then for the first time she seemed to become aware of Bobby's presence.

"And who are you, cherie?" she inquired.

"I'm Bobby, Aunt Delphine," Bobby replied patiently. "Don't you remember? I came down this morning with Henri."

"Yes, yes, of course," The old lady gave another of her vague smiles. Releasing my hand, she started toward the door. But when she was about halfway there, she paused, and began to look about her uncertainly.

"Have you seen them?" she asked, addressing both of us in general.

I remembered what Amedee had said about her false teeth.

"No, Aunt Delphine," I answered. "But if you like, Bobby and I will help you look for them."

"No, cherie, that won't be necessary," she said. "They will come of their own accord and make themselves visible when they are ready." Then she continued on out of the room.

"Poor old thing!" Bobby exclaimed, laughing. "Dede told you, I suppose?"

"Yes," I answered, "but he didn't say she had them trained like carrier pigeons, to—"

"Peter, what's the matter?" Bobby demanded.

"Bobby, she wasn't talking about her teeth!" I rasped. "They're in her mouth. I saw them when she smiled. She was referring to something else. It's almost as if she was talking about something supernatural!"

Chapter 3

When Bobby and I came downstairs a half hour later, we found most of the family assembled in the smaller drawing room or "back parlor."

First, there was Uncle Raoul; a tall, dark man whose soldierly erect bearing belied his sixty odd years. Outwardly he was suave and courteous, but it was evident that he was inwardly seething. I could guess that he was bitterly resentful of "the woman's" calm assumption of the position of hostess in his father's house. As for Aunt Minerva herself, she was almost openly triumphant. Evidently she was fully aware of her brother-in-law's feelings, and was smugly enjoying the fact that he was powerless to do anything about her.

Then there was Beauregard Dumont—or Beau, as he was called by the others. He was, as Bobby had said, strikingly like Amedee, but there was also a difference. That difference was betrayed in the devil-may-care recklessness of his dark eyes and the air of cynical amusement with which he regarded the scene around him.

Lee, his elder brother, was entirely unlike him in both appearance and manner. Whereas Beau was dark and dashing, he was extremely fair, with delicate, almost effeminate features and the shadow of some chronic illness plainly visible beneath the waxlike pallor of his skin. Instead of being amused by the attitude of his father and his aunt toward each other, he appeared to be acutely embarrassed, even distressed, by it.

The final person in the room whom I had not previously met was a rather handsome man who looked to be somewhere in his middle thirties. His black hair was lightly touched with gray at the temples; and he wore a gold-rimmed pince-nez through which he looked at the rest of the party with a sort of tolerant detachment. Aunt Minerva introduced him as Cousin Jefferson Marshall.

In addition to Pick, who had come down with Bobby and me, Amedee and his brother Henri were also present. Amedee had assumed an attitude of polite ease, which Henri was making a boyishly grim effort to copy. But the behavior of both toward their Aunt Minerva in particular—was just a shade too formally correct to be entirely natural.

Claude Dumont had been absent from the room upon our arrival; but now he appeared in the doorway, carrying a tray on which were an enormous cocktail shaker and several already filled glasses.

"I told that old servant he didn't know how to mix drinks, so I mixed my own," he announced loudly. "Who'll have a real, honest-to-God Manhattan?"

He received no immediate response, and his eye came to rest upon me.

"What about you, Peter? You'll have a lil' drink, won't you?"

"Peter doesn't drink Manhattans," Amedee snapped before I could answer.

Claude ignored him, but he didn't press his invitation. Instead he turned to Bobby who, with Henri, happened to be standing near him.

"What about you, honey chile?" he asked with an ogling grin. "Won't you taste my wares?"

I didn't catch Bobby's reply in words, but I saw her shake her head. However, Claude wasn't taking no for an answer a second time. He set for the tray on a nearby table, and picked up one of the filled glasses.

"Oh, come on," he coaxed, thrusting it at her. "Just to please me. Good ole Southern hospitality, y'know."

He pronounced it "hospitality." Henri took a step forward.

"She told you she didn't want any," he said.

Claude glanced down at him impatiently.

"You keep out o' this, Small Change," he commanded. "I wasn't asking you."

"But I'm answering," Henri retorted. He was glaring up at his larger cousin like a fox terrier defying a bulldog. "Or maybe you need your ears slapped back so you can hear better."

For a moment the two stood face to face; Henri wiry and rapier-like, Claude towering over him with the menacing bulk of a bluegeon. By this time every eye in the room was on them; but it was one of those situations where it is almost impossible to interfere without making matters worse. Aunt Minerva was smiling indulgently, as though to put the whole incident down to her son's boyish high spirits; but there was a nervous quality about her smile which betrayed that even she realized that he had gone too far.

Bobby, evidently in the hope of averting the trouble which seemed to be imminent, started to put out her hand to take the glass which Claude still held; but Henri, perceiving what she was about to do, caught her wrist in his left hand, staying the gesture. His next act, I knew as certainly as though he had announced it, would be to snatch the glass himself. And having seen the Dumont temper in action on one or two occasions before, I also knew what he would do after that. He would fling the contents of that glass full into Claude's beefy smirking face.

I held my breath, and prayed that some sort of intervention would come. And then, miraculously, it

TO RAM TAX BILL THROUGH HOUSE

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Democratic tax law managers made ready today to ram through the House a bill slashing excise taxes by $1,010,000,000 a year, after tacking on a corporation tax boost to avoid a veto.

The House ways and means committee voted $433,000,000 in new taxes late yesterday. It was designed to meet President Truman's requirement that the excise cuts must be offset by larger taxes elsewhere, before he will sign the bill.

This would cut the tax load of small corporations earning from $5,000 to $107,000; but jump the present 38 per cent income tax rate for the biggest corporations to almost 41 per cent.

Administration leaders immediately predicted the tax bill, in a form suitable to the President will be handed to the White House in time for Congress to adjourn July 31.

However, this schedule assumes prompt approval by the House, where the bill is expected to come up next week, and the less likely prospect of quick Senate passage.

If it goes through, excises now imposed will be slashed—probably on September 1—on fur coats, movies, jewelry, travel tickets, luggage, telephones, tires, tubes, baby bottle warmers and scores of other items.

The big corporation tax boost, if approved by House and Senate, would just about cover completely the estimated $1,010,000,000 excise cut.

Armed Retires To Calumet Blue Grass

New York, June 20 (AP)—Armed today was heading back to the lush blue grass of Calumet farm in Lexington, Ky., where he started out as an angry duckling. But the retired old man of the turf always will be remembered as the golden gelding.

The gallant galloper ended his story-book career as the third great-did.

As Henri had caught Bobby's wrist, Beau Dumont had disengaged his lean length from the woodbox. He didn't appear to hurry, but he managed to get across the room before either Henri or Claude could make another move.

"I guess I'd better taste that stuff to see if it's safe for a lady," he drawled lazily. Appropriating the glass himself before Claude could summon sufficient presence of mind to resist, he took a drink from it. "Poison!" he exclaimed, grimacing extravagantly. "Claude, what have you got in there besides carbolic acid and nitroglycerine?"

There was a general laugh from the others, in which Claude joined feebly; and the tension was broken. But there had been something about the incident which suggested that, far from being an isolated occurrence, it had been the latest of a number of similar incidents.

Mars Flying Giant Sets New Record

San Diego, Calif., June 20 (AP)—The giant Caroline Mars ended a 2,600-mile flight from Hawaii on Sunday with 114 men aboard. Never before, the Navy said, had so many been carried so far non-stop in one aircraft.

A little later, a sister flying boat—the Hawaii Mars—settled down on San Diego bay with 106 men. She had taken off two hours and five minutes before the Caroline Saturday, flown 2,400 miles to Alameda, Calif., added 5,000 pounds of cargo and then hopped on here.

In these two four-engined craft, which spread their wings 200 feet, the Navy had ferried an entire company of Marine Reservists in full combat kit from the islands for training exercises at nearby Camp Pendleton.

The lift made by the Caroline—which has more powerful engines than the other Mars flying boats—wasn't a world record for passengers. That was made by the Marshall Mars last year. She carried 308 men—but on the short, 450-mile hop from Alameda to San Diego.

Adams County History

The third in a series of articles on Adams county in connection with the Sesqui-Centennial anniversary of its founding is published in the current Bulletin of the Department of Internal Affairs. The article follows:

By DR. ROBERT FORTENBAUGH
July 21, 1791, Washington crossed the southeastern corner of present Adams county, passing by Littlestown on his way from Mt. Vernon to Philadelphia. He had spent the previous night in Taneytown and that night in York. In 1794 he crossed the entire width of the county from west to east on his way to Philadelphia after having gone to the western part of the state on account of the disturbance attending the "Whiskey Rebellion." Going by the "Marsh Creek" road, he lodged the night of October 23 at the Russell Tavern, later known as the Carey house, which still stands about 3 miles north of Gettysburg, a little to the west of the Biglerville road where it is crossed by the road on which he traveled.

Churches founded in this period are of interest and they are:

Lutheran: Arendtsville, Flohr's, St. James, Gettysburg, Bender's, Abbotstown, and Upper Meridian.

German Reformed: Arendtsville, Flohr's, Bender's, St. Mark's, The "White" Church, Baltimore road, Trinity, Gettysburg.

Catholic: St. Aloysius, Littlestown. The organization of these churches, especially Lutheran and Reformed, indicates the shift from Scotch-Irish to German dominance in racial composition of the population.

The first post office in the county was at Gettysburg. James Scott was appointed first postmaster, July 1, 1788. Salary for the first year, $34.38. As to the creation of the county, the notes in this section constitute a digest of Edward McPherson's "The Story of the Creation of Adams County, Pennsylvania, and of the Selection of Gettysburg as Its Seat of Justice, 1889."

Losses 531 Acres
When the movement for separation began, York county had 1452 square miles and when it ended it had 921 square miles. Two causes combined to produce the movement:

(1) Irregular shape of the county, producing dissatisfaction over long distance to county seat by people in the more westerly parts; (2) conflict between predominantly German influence in east, and Scotch-Irish in the west. To this is to be added the hope of pecuniary advantage from a new organization which "was reinforced by a desire to secure a market more convenient than Philadelphia, now made possible by the opening of north-south roads connecting the Cumberland Valley through the Marsh Creek settlement with Baltimore." The desire for division was not entirely unanimous on the part of the people of the westerly area. Remonstrating petitions, notably from Germany township, opposed it.

The first recorded mention of the subject is in the Journal of the Assembly (then sitting in Philadelphia) in 1789. On March 20 a petition from 1,356 inhabitants of the western part of the county for creation of a separate county was presented. No remonstrating petition was filed, but the number of taxables was then 3,652, so petitioners were less than a majority. The petition was referred to a committee which did not report until last day of the session, September, 1789. This was favorable, but it recommended reference of the question to the next Assembly, for technical reasons of legislative practice. The general effect of all this was to stir up both friends and foes of the proposition.

In 1790, 466 inhabitants added names to the petition, making a total of 1816 signers. But 1181 signed a petition of remonstrance. All these were from the easterly part of the proposed new county. March, 1790, the committee reported adversely, though not in a hostile manner, but rather against the expediency of division at that time. However, a representative, Thomas Clingan, of Hamiltonban, on March 23 made an appeal to the Assembly, while the report was pending, and moved to postpone final action on it so that he might move to bring in a bill to create a new county. The motion was agreed to, 34-25. He stood alone in the York county delegation, but, after some maneuvering, the bill was passed, March 30, 34-23. It was then ordered published for third reading but not pressed to final vote. A change at that time from the Constitution of 1776 to that of 1790 left the matter as unfinished business and it died. If it had been passed to final vote it would have passed, and the county would have been created with substantially the same limits as adopted 10 years later after a sharp and bitter struggle.

Had the line of division specified in this bill been adhered to, Adams county would have had, in addition to its present area, nearly the whole of Franklin township, York county, a triangular corner of Washington township, and a strip of Heidelberg, and, probably of Manheim township. If the line of division later demanded had not been set some miles east of this first proposal, it is likely that the new county would have been erected shortly thereafter.

First County Site Suggestion
While the bill of 1790 failed, a resolution was offered naming a committee to view and examine the situation of several places proposed for the seat of justice, and make report to the Assembly at its next session. Not adopted, but it seems that the committee, acting privately, indicated a preference for a tract of 125 acres, belonging to Garret Van Arsdale, just east of the Hunterstown settlement. An interesting paper, dated May 21, 1790, never executed, was presented to the committee in behalf of "the pleasant situation and convenience of Gettysburg by the fertility of its neighborhood and centrality of its situation." So the question of the county site was early connected with the new county project, and had great effect on the final decision.

The session of 1791 was the first in which Pennsylvania had a bi-cameral legislature (as provided in the Constitution of 1790). The York county delegation in the House of Representatives was strongly against division. The previous petition was presented, but also remonstrating petitions. The committee reported adversely and the report was affirmed by the House, 34-27.

Nothing was done or even proposed in the session of 1792. However, a movement began which culminated in a convention of delegates at Hunterstown which on December 13, 1791, voted unanimously in favor of division, and set up a new line of division, further east than the Clingan proposal, which would have included "Hanover Town." McPherson believes that this was a scheme to defeat Gettysburg and favor Hunterstown as the seat of justice, as more central in such a new county area, and or a scheme to claim more than was expected in the hope of getting, by compromise, what they were satisfied to take.

A new petition for division was circulated and had 1569 signers. The petition demanded a new county with the largest area proposed during the whole agitation. By its terms the old county would be divided into two nearly equal parts and so the boundary line was pushed much farther east than any other suggested line of division. The opposition was effective, and nothing came out of committee consideration in the session of 1793. Attached to the petition were:

Two offers of land for the county seat were made:
(1) Renewed offer of Garret Van Arsdale for the same site as before which he claimed "was formerly appointed to the seat of justice" by the committee, (2) An offer by William Sturgeon for a tract of 203 acres in Mountpleasant township.

In 1794 friends of a new county which said the movement was apparently being sacrificed in the struggle for choice of a county seat. The general election of representatives seemed to turn on the question of division and its enemies won. The House unanimously adopted a report against the project. But later in the session the matter was reopened. Former petitions were renewed and new petitions to the same end were added, with preference expressed for choosing Sturgeon's land for the county seat. Again the committee reported adversely and its report was adopted unanimously September 15, 1794.

In anticipation of the need of it, the citizens of Gettysburg prepared and executed a bond to secure funds for the county buildings. Overwhelming defeat of the bill prevented their presenting it.

The matter was quiet for several years, and then in 1796-97 the journal of the Legislature shows 1,412 signers for a division, according to bounds not stated in the journal, with 459 signers of a petition opposing division. Nothing of the efforts at this time except to warn York county that in 1798 something affirmative would be undertaken.

The Effort of 1798
In January, 1798, it was found that there were 1974 petitioners for division. Of these 1,418 were for the extreme eastern line. There were, on the other hand, 1,690 petitioners against any division. The select committee reported in February in favor of a new county, but with a line of division which left the old county the tier of heavy German townships. This line was beginning at Trent's Gap to the northeastern line of Berwick, along Berwick and Paradise northwardly to the road leading from Oxford to Hanover, thence south to the Maryland line. This was substantially the line finally adopted. Amendments were offered, reducing the territory of the new county. No votes were taken except on motion to appoint a committee to examine lines and to consider site for seat of justice. Defeated, 21-41. The bill went over for a year, and was recommended to the next Legislature. Evidently York was fighting for terms.

In January, 1799, the committee reported the bill with same line as in 1798, with site of county seat vacant. Then delaying tactics followed. Proposition to substitute the line of the amendment of previous year was defeated. Proposition to establish Hunterstown as county seat defeated, also to establish it near Hugh King's farm was defeated, then to establish it at Gettysburg defeated. Motion to leave vacant site of county seat passed, 42-26. Resolution to direct preparation of the new county bill with seat of justice left vacant, passed, 51-19.

On February 2, representative of Gettysburg appeared for the first time and offered (1) a conveyance of ground-rents on the town lots in trust for the benefit of the new county; also a convenient lot free for a jail; (2) a bond securing payment of $4,000 for expenses of the public

WOULD OUTLAW WARLIKE TOYS IN W. GERMANY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

The parliament of Western Germany has under consideration an extraordinary measure which might well be studied by other nations of our troubled world.

That is a proposal, introduced by Chancellor Adenauer's Christian Democratic party, which would prohibit the manufacture or sale of warlike toys in Western Germany. It also asks that the allied high commission forbid the members of the occupation forces to give such toys to German children.

This odd measure obviously is inspired by the fact that warlike toys tend to create glorification of war in youthful minds. In that sense such playthings may be breeders of aggression which shows itself in later years.

Most Popular Toys
Germany knows all this from harsh experience through many generations. The Prussianism which has been responsible for two world wars, among others, has started its monstrous teachings of militarism with the tiny folk, and the first lessons have been disguised in warlike toys of all sorts.

It isn't strange therefore, that, despite the crushing defeat which Germany has suffered as the result of the Hitlerian aggression, the most popular toys on sale last winter should have been implements of war. These included tanks, warships, bombing planes and submarines. It was the Prussian tradition carrying on.

Hitler—the last great exponent of Prussianism—recognized fully the advantage to be gained by beginning militaristic training among the very youth—both boys and girls. Thus we saw him organizing them and taking over their training to adapt them to his evil designs.

Admired Prussians
From boyhood Hitler was a vast admirer of the Prussian race, and as a lad used to dream of the day when the Prussians would rule the whole world. Later he came to regard himself as the chosen leader of this master race, and the Prussian warlords were quick to give him their support when he developed signs of outstanding leadership.

In days not so long past Prussian militarism showed itself in many walks of life, even in peace time. We saw the little boys graduate from their war toys to student days at the great universities, where the necessary badge of valor was a nasty scar across the face from dueling. Often youths deliberately disfigured themselves to get this distinction.

The Prussian army officers were buildings. In the committee of the whole, Gettysburg was inserted as the seat of justice. February 13 the bill was amended by striking out Gettysburg and inserting "at the Low Dutch Meeting House near the forks of the road." This location was about 5 miles east of Gettysburg. It proved to be the most formidable rival of Gettysburg; less convenient but had the merit of being less identified with personal interests and ambitions. The amendment passed, 42-23. February 14 the bill passed, as amended, 52-18. Gettysburg fought the bill in the Senate. Then some residents of Berwick objected to the location of the line, they preferring to stay in the old county. A new line was proposed in the Senate and, by vote of 12-11, the Senate postponed consideration until the next session. The bill was left in strong position for passage the next year, and Gettysburg was at that time decidedly in the background so far as the site of the county seat was concerned.

The Success of 1800
Gettysburg's interests were greatly advanced by the election of Alexander Cobean as representative from the county. John Agnew was sent as commissioner of the Gettysburg interests. The commissioner reported the county bill to the Senate, December 14, 1799. After several amendments were lost, especially on the question of the county seat, the Senate passed the bill which contained a clause in the third section that the county should be held "at the town of Gettysburg." Efforts to change that clause had been defeated and Gettysburg had won out. The House made only a verbal amendment to which no one objected, and passed the bill, and sent it to Governor Thomas McKean who signed it January 22, 1800.

The new county bill was one of ten such bills passed in that session of the Legislature which had moved to Lancaster, which became for a while the capital of Pennsylvania. This was the first of the ten to be signed by the governor and so Adams is Number 26 among the counties of Pennsylvania, now 67. A commission was appointed by the governor to mark and run the boundaries, as provided in the bill. This was made up of Jacob Spangler, deputy surveyor of York county; Samuel Sloan, deputy surveyor of Adams county, and William Waugh.

The line was described as follows: "From Trent's Gap by the Carlisle and Baltimore Road to Binder's, straight line to mouth of Abbott's Run, along Berwick and Paradise township line until it strikes Manheim, westwardly along Manheim and Berwick line to the Oxford and Hunterstown road thence south to the Maryland Line."

lords of all they surveyed. Many of them were arrogant, swashbuckling individuals who pushed humble folk off the sidewalks, or even struck them with swords to get quick action. These were the fellows who had cut their teeth on toy guns.

Votes "In Favor"
This Prussianism, which was largely responsible for both world wars, was strongly in evidence in the first global conflict. We saw much of it along the fighting fronts, and later among Prussian officials after the surrender.

Small wonder that the allies swore to smash Prussianism as the main-spring of Germany's transgressions. They failed to succeed after the first world war, and they now are faced with the same problem again.

From here it looks as though the suggestion to abolish warlike toys in Germany is a good and hopeful sign, especially since it comes from Germans themselves. So this column casts its vote for adoption of the resolution in the Bonn parliament. And maybe it wouldn't harm some other countries to overhaul their toy departments a bit.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, June 20 (AP)—One of the oldest and most respected universities in the South may give up football within the next couple of years. It won't happen before 1951 because there's a pretty good team coming up this fall. . . . But the school, with harder entrance requirements than its rivals, is finding the competition for players tough as well as distasteful. . . . Looks like Stanford is coming back as an athletic power—third in the Marietta regatta, second in the NCAA track meet and already tabbed as the team to beat in Pacific Coast football next fall. . . . When the Lamotta-Graziopoli fight was called off, the advance sale was less than 24 G's, which isn't a lot two weeks before a big outdoor show.

HE'S IN THEIR HAIR

If Denny Myers, Boston college football coach, wants to do a little preliminary scouting for the Eagles' game with Georgia, Oct. 27, he only has to go to the barber shop. . . . Seems Denny's pet barber is Ray Schillone, a former wrestler, whose son Joe is a sophomore fullback at Georgia. . . . and Ray has the shop walls plastered with photos of George footballers.

ONE-MINUTE SPORTS PAGE

Although George Weiss has been taking some hard raps for that Yankee-Brown trade, he has at least proved it isn't impossible to deal with him. Rival magnates were claiming they couldn't trade with the Yanks because George always demanded too much. . . . Incidentally, Yank followers report the club has been scouting Chuck Connors, flashy Montreal first sacker. . . . A precedent was set at the Marietta regatta when members of Washington's three winning crews were awarded individual medals. They were presented by John Collier, president of the Goodrich Rubber Co., who is an old Cornell oarsman. . . . And don't listen too closely to talk of returning the regatta to Poughkeepsie until Intercollegiate Rowing association officials have had a chance to study the balance sheet. The observation train alone was worth some $20,000, which they couldn't get at Poughkeepsie.

History Repeating In Batting Contest

New York, June 20 (AP)—The National league batting race is turning out to be a replica of last year's three-man battle among Brooklyn's Jackie Robinson and St. Louis' Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter. The only difference is that the Dodgers' Duke Snider has horned in.

Through games of Sunday, June 18, only 21 points separated the quartet. Musial, in front practically from the start of the campaign, still led the pack.

Stan dropped 20 points during the week as his average shrank to .364. That was 12 points better than Robinson's .352. Last year's batting king owns a six-point bulge over Snider for the runner-up spot with Slaughter a closed fourth via a .343 mark.

Fifth spot belongs to the surprising Eddie Stanky. The New York Giants' scrappy infielder is tied with Chicago's Andy Pafko at .333. Johnny Hopp, a hot hitter early in the campaign, dropped to seventh with .331. He was followed by New York's Whitey Lockman, .329; Philadelphia's Dick Sisler, .328; and Cincinnati's Johnny Wyrostek, .322.

Interstate League

(By The Associated Press)
The Class B Interstate league is undergoing a rash of rumors—some denied and at least one confirmed.

The first report had the Wilmington Blue Rocks moving in search of greater fan interest. This possibility was admitted by Owner-President Robert R. M. Carpenter of the parent Philadelphia Phillies.

The home game attendance has been poor this season despite the fact the Rocks are in second place. What's to blame is a matter of conjecture, says Carpenter. Television may or may not be partly at fault.

Close on the heels of the Wilmington report came a rumor that the cellar-dwelling Lancaster Red Roses are looking for greener pastures: This one was denied by co-owner Edgar McClain.

Last night's entire schedule was washed out. As a result three of tonight's games were turned into doubleheaders.

Tonight's schedule: Hagerstown at Trenton (2), York at Wilmington (2), Harrisburg at Lancaster (2) and Sunbury at Allentown.

British Freighter Sinks; 72 Missing

Suez, Egypt, June 20 (AP)—The British freighter Indian Enterprise exploded and sank in the Red Sea yesterday, and 72 crewmen are missing, agents for the vessel announced today.

Only one member of the crew of 73, an injured man, was rescued after a blast tore the ship apart about 300 miles south of Suez.

Spokesmen for the agents said the 7,100-ton ship, enroute from London to Indian ports, was carrying 580 tons of explosives consigned to the Indian government.

The vessel, which carried no passengers, was officered by Britons. The crew members were mostly Indians. The sole survivor is said to have been an Indian seaman, picked up by the Norwegian tanker H. Westfal-Larsen, which is enroute to Suez.

OFFER HURLEY CHANCE TO AIR HIS CHARGES

By OLIVER W. DE WOLF

Washington, June 20 (AP)—Patrick J. Hurley, former U. S. ambassador to China, got a bid today from Senate investigators to elaborate on his charge that the State Department had shielded officials who "sold or gave" top secret documents to "pro-Communists."

Hurley made the charge yesterday in a statement issued at Santa Fe, N. M. It was linked to the 1945 Amerasia documents theft case now under investigation by a Senate foreign relations subcommittee.

Chairman Tydings (D-Md.) told reporters the committee would call Hurley to testify as soon as possible. Senator Hickenlooper (R-Iowa), a committee member, also urged Hurley's appearance.

Claim Truth Withheld
Hurley charged that the State Department has for five years "kept the people from knowing the truth about the theft of top secret documents by officials of the State Department who sold or gave them to pro-Communists."

He also accused State Department officials, both in China and in Washington, of sabotaging American policy in China while he was ambassador there in 1944 and 1945.

Hurley named John S. Service, State Department foreign service officer, as one of the persons who he said supplied Chinese Communist Leader Mao Tse-tung with secret information in 1944.

Service was one of the six persons arrested in 1945 after federal raiders had seized hundreds of government documents in the New York offices of Amerasia magazine. He was not indicted.

Charged By McCarthy
Last March he was charged by Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.) with having "Communist affiliations." A few days later he was called back to the United States from a new assignment in India, to face a fresh

HOT, FIERY GAS Stomach Like A Furnace

A Gettysburg man said recently that his stomach used to burn like a "gas factory!" That is, when he ate a meal it seemed to turn right into hot gas. He was always bloated, had gas pains daily. But now this man says he is FREE OF STOMACH GAS and he says the change is due to taking CERTA-VIN. His meals agree with him.

CERTA-VIN is a new formula. Taken before meals it works with your food, expels the gas, and thus you get the fullest good out of your meals. It contains Ten Great Herbs, plus vitamin B and iron. Besides relieving gas, it also enriches the blood (with iron) and makes stronger nerves (with vitamin B). Miserable people soon feel better all over. So don't go on suffering! Tomorrow the committee plans to take testimony from John E. Peurifoy, deputy Undersecretary of State. McCarthy charged in a speech last Thursday that Peurifoy made a "pay-off" deal with a witness to protect Service in testimony before the committee.

McCarthy named the witness as Emmanuel Larsen, a former State Department employee and a co-defendant in the Amerasia case. Larsen testified before the committee recently behind closed doors.

Chemist Accused Of Spying Being Moved

Utica, N. Y., June 20 (AP)—Alfred Dean Slack, accused of wartime spying for Soviet Russia, left here today by automobile for Tennessee under heavy guard.

The 44-year-old Syracuse chemist wore handcuffs, which were attached to a chain around his waist. He was in custody of two deputy marshals. Another deputy followed in another car.

The three guards declined to say whether Slack would be driven all the way to Tennessee or whether he would be transferred to a train en route.

Slack, charged with espionage in connection with the Dr. Klaus Fuchs spy ring, told a reporter that he had been well treated since he entered jail last Thursday night.

LIVE POULTRY—Practically no receipts. Too few sales to quote prices.

Baltimore Livestock
CATTLE—Fresh receipts estimated at 1,200 head fell 20 per cent short of number sold last Monday, but showed little difference from the number on offer a year ago. Salable run included an additional 200 head from late last week. General holding quality was not as good as last Monday and cattle in most cases showed more prominent ribs. Included in the receipts was the equivalent of 20 loads of slaughter steers and 10 loads of stock cattle. Balance of run consisted largely of cows with about a normal supply of bulls and heifers included.

Slaughter steers moved seaward slowly at unevenly steady to as much as 50c lower prices, compared with last Thursday. A higher percentage of the run showed evidence of grass feeding and these showed most of the decline. Little net change in the dry-fed, dry-fed cattle selling at $10 and above. One load and several smaller lots of high-grade and choice 900-1,000-pound slaughter steers and steer yearlings, $30-31.75. Most of mixed lots of medium and good steers, 1,000-1,100 pounds, $23-25.75. Few common yearlings down to $26. Part load of good and choice 845-pound mixed steers and heifers, $30.50.

The small supply of heifers on offer consisted mainly of odd lots of trucked-in offerings. Sales about steady with late last week. A package of high-grade 777-pound heifers, $28.50; other good heifers, $25.50-27.50; common and medium, $20-25; odd cutters, $18.50-19.

Dealings in cow division again very uneven and a two-way trend was in evidence after early round. High-medium and good cows steady to strong while the predominant supply of other grades moved seaward at unevenly steady to 50c lower prices. In some cases declines of more than 50c were registered. Few good young cows, $23.50 and $24, but most of the good cows, $21-23. Common and medium cows, $18-20.50 and canners and cutters, $25-18. Odd shelly canners to $15 and below.

There was no change in the selling level for bulls compared with last Thursday. Trading slow. Sales made during the morning were steady with last Thursday but the undertone was definitely weaker. Few medium and good 400-600-pound stock calves and stocker steers, $26-32, latter price for a load of 400-pound calves. Few common and medium light stockers and stock calves, $21-24.

CALVES—Although calves running on the grass were under more pressure this morning sales for the most part were steady with last Friday on all weights and grades of calves and vealers. Good and choice vealers, $20-29, top $29; common and medium calves and vealers, $20-26; culs, $13-19.

HOGS—Dealings in the hog department fairly active and prices advanced generally 50c over last Friday's quotations on barrows and gilts. Some sharp upturn in the upturn and steady to 25c higher. Good and choice 180-220-pound barrows and gilts, $21.00-21.75; 220-240 pounds, $20.75-21.25; 240-260 pounds, $20.25-20.75; 260-300 pounds, $19-19.50; over 300-pound weights from $19, depending on weight and condition. Lighterweights, 120-140 pounds, $17.50-18.00; 140-160 pounds, $18.75-19.25; 160-180 pounds, $20.00-21.50; less than 400 pounds, $16-16.75, few choice around 300-pounds and lighter, $17. Good, 400-450-pound sows, $15.25-15.75 while heavierweights from $15 depending on weight and condition. Stags, $2-3 under same weight sows with weights stags showing the full downturn. Garbage-fed hogs, $1.50-2 under price of same weight grain-fed.

SHEEP—Spring lambs and shorn slaughter ewes steady with last Friday and some sales registered discounts due to wet weather. A small lot of sorted, choice 86-pound spring lambs, $29. Practical top and most same good and choice spring lambs, $28 down. A few common 57-pound averages $20 and a package of culs, $15. A few good and choice shorn ewes, 140 pounds, $8 and a few common 88 pounds, $5. Choice around 110-pound and lighter offerings considered eligible $10.

KIDNAPER OF TWO YOUTHS IS SHOT TO DEATH

Steuensville, O., June 20 (AP)—The kidnapping of two Pennsylvania boys and their imprisonment in an auto trunk during a 1,800 mile, two-day ride was a closed case today—their captor dead with a policeman's bullet in his heart.

But the reasons for the strange and violent crime spree of Joe Pacific, 32-year-old Canonsburg, Pa. electrician, probably were known to him alone when he died emptying his pistol at police pursuers in near-by Mingo Junction yesterday afternoon.

The two boys Pacific kidnapped—Nick Cursi, 18, and Joseph Zolmerchik, 19, both of Canonsburg, Pa.—came out of the harrowing experience weak from thirst and hunger, bleeding from head wounds and terror-stricken. But they were not harmed seriously.

Their long ride started near Canonsburg Saturday night when they picked up the hitchhiking Pacific on their way to a dance. Pacific robbed them of $16, Zolmerchik said, returned it saying he was joking, then took it back again, slugged them with his pistol butt, and locked them in the car trunk.

Wife Calls Police

Yesterday morning Pacific drove the car to the home of his estranged wife's parents, beat her with his gun and forced her to go away with him in the car.

It was the wife, Matilda, 30, who called Mingo Junction police when Pacific left the car there to go into a store to buy her a dress to replace the blood-stained one she wore.

The kidnaper fled afoot and eluded a police posse for more than an hour. Sgt. Sam Baker said Pacific shot at him three times and missed before Baker fired a bullet into his chest. The fugitive ran a few yards, slumped down, fired another shot at his pursuers and collapsed dying.

Coroner John P. Smarrella of Jefferson county closed official investigation of the case last night by ruling the slaying "justifiable homicide."

SIX EUROPEAN NATIONS CONFER ON "POOL PLAN"

Paris, June 20 (AP)—French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman today told delegates from six western European nations, assembled here to plan a merger of their coal and steel industries, that "We feel we will not be permitted to fail or quit without finishing our job."

The conference which Schuman opened in the foreign ministry Salle de L'Horloge (clock room) was historic, he said, because never before had the West European states delegated a "fraction of their sovereignty to and independent, supranational authority."

Urging his proposal to put Western Europe's coal and steel industries under control of an international body empowered to make binding decisions, Schuman said the nations must find means "outside our national limits" to create a more rational economic structure, to cheapen production and to open new markets.

Seeks British Cooperation
The six nations represented today—France, Western Germany, Belgium, Italy, The Netherlands and Luxembourg—all have agreed to the idea, Britain has held back.

Schuman expressed a hope that the British later would join the pool. "We cannot conceive of Europe without her," he declared, adding, "We know—and this reassures us—that the British government hopes for the success of our work."

Following today's opening meeting, the delegates will hold secret sessions to plan details of the working of the pool and its controlling authority.

Britain, wary of giving final control of her vast coal and steel industries to someone else, will be informed in detail of the progress of the talks. Foreign Office Economist Herve Alphand will confer daily with British minister in Paris William Hayter, supplying details for a nightly report to London.

France Drafts Plan
France has a plan drafted by top economic planner Jean Monnet that includes an entire treaty, drafted to the last "whereas." It will be submitted to the other delegates for criticism and negotiation. If this has not been done already.

Other nations also may have some partial or complete drafts of their own to put forward.

Little of the French plan has been allowed to leak to the public. At a recent news conference reporters did draw from Schuman these few hints:

The pool might be put into effect by stages. At the beginning individual nations might have a veto power over the acts of the "supranational" authority Schuman wants to control the pool. The authority itself might be tied to the Council of Europe.

The Council, a year-old organization of Western European countries, has no executive power. In private, the British often criticize it as a "talk shop."

named head coach by the school board last night.

Palmer succeeded Ben Kribbs, who resigned to become head football coach at Clarion State Teachers college.

The school directors also elected Calbert E. Welliver, now head basketball coach, as athletic director and member of the football coaching staff.

Shriners Swarm Over Los Angeles

Los Angeles, June 20 (AP)—Mecca moved west today as an estimated 125,000 Shriners swarmed over Los Angeles and its far flung environs for the 70th annual session of the imperial council.

Today was a day of parades for 13,000 delegates from 67 temples, most of them marching in their colorful uniforms behind blaring bands. Mounted units included 380 horsemen, six camels from Madison, Wis., and scores aboard all manner of weird conveyances, ranging from a 1901 one-cylinder automobile from Louisville, Ky., to a cable street car from San Francisco.

Despite a local traction strike, nobles found their way around in chartered taxis and cars of accommodating citizens. Several deputations from far northern locales declared they brought their own sourdough just in case the also-current bakers' strike proves inconvenient.

Officially the convocation opened Sunday and will continue through Thursday.

TAX EVASION APPEAL FILED

Philadelphia, June 20 (AP)—Convicted of participating in an income tax evasion scheme, Frederick S. Fox, 75-year-old editor of the Norristown (Pa.) Times-Herald, today drafted a motion for a new trial.

Fox was convicted on two counts yesterday by a U. S. court jury that deliberated two hours and 40 minutes. The conviction carries a possible maximum of 10 years in jail, or $20,000 fine, or both.

Immediately after the verdict, counsel for Fox was granted five days by Judge Thomas J. Clary in which to file a motion for a new trial. The trial for Fox was continued at $1,000.

Fox was indicted along with Ralph Beaver Strassburger, owner and publisher of the newspaper.

Strassburger has been living in France for three years and was not brought to trial.

U. S. Attorney Thomas J. Curtin said in his summation to the jury
